

CABARET CLUBS SCARED, RESPECT SABBATH MORN

No Daybreak Drunkenness, and Trottery Gates Close at Early Hour.

SLEUTHS ON WATCH FIND NO DISORDER

Next Move of Authorities Likely To Be Against Card Scheme to Evade Excise Law.

License Commissioner Bell's inspectors found Broadway and its side streets subdued places yesterday. They were making an inspection of the cabaret places and trotteries against which complaints have been made both before and since the Eugene Kelly incident.

The Commissioner said that places against which he had complaints had been warned, and the purpose of his men yesterday was to see whether they had observed the warnings. He said his men found things orderly.

It was reported yesterday that State Excise Commissioner Farley, whose men showed unusual vigilance yesterday, would probably bring about forty complaints against the proprietors of restaurants along Broadway. Inspectors from his department kept a careful watch early Sunday morning for violations of the excise laws, and again yesterday they were on the alert.

Unless the seeker for liquor had a close acquaintance with the bartender, he was unable to get a single drink yesterday in a Broadway saloon, from Forty-second to 110th Street, and even on the side streets and other avenues it was difficult to get inside a barroom. In places where women are accustomed to visit, Sundays a close watch was maintained, and all women were regarded yesterday as more or less suspicious.

At Conny Island, too, where throngs gathered for the real opening of the season, detectives made close inspections of the restaurants noted principally for their cabarets. Inspectors from the Conny Island and Willowburgh Avenue stations were at the island all day yesterday, picking up information that might lead to complaints against proprietors. The detectives made their headquarters at Stuyvesant, which was not looked upon as a law-breaking establishment, since it closed promptly at 1 o'clock and has music only between dances. From Stuyvesant they scattered forth to the other resorts marked for inspection.

"More like Sunday morning" was the comment of those on Broadway early yesterday. The tightening of the law had done its work, while the trotteries that operate clubs were open after the hour set by law for closing, there was less disorder and fewer drunken women around than has been the case on preceding Sundays.

Clubs Close Early.

Ordinarily the "clubs" were open until daybreak, or as much later as any considerable number of "members" wished to stay around, drink and dance. Yesterday was an exception. Those inside at midnight were permitted to linger, but by 1 o'clock most of the places were pretty well cleaned out. On the doors were husky watchmen, and if necessary, they passed few. At Madison, where there are iron gates at the entrance, the door was blocked early. All who wished to get out were accommodated. None was admitted after hours. Those who came in made as they were away, to try for better luck in some other place.

Hustlers, downtown, followed the same rule, and it was quiet also at the uptown resort of that name, with a light attendance at the two clubs. Healy's, followed its rule of running close to the wind.

There were even more police on duty in the district than on the preceding night. Many of these were in plain clothes, and it was difficult to identify the precincts they came from. In Inspector Morris's district many of the men on duty at the extreme end, that is to say, near Forty-second Street, were from the large end of the district. Inspector Laver also had an unusual number of men about his district, but they seemed to take life less seriously than did the men at the other end of the Tenderloin. Dever, according to the talk of the district, feels that the vice crusade is directed at him, but he will not discuss the situation. Friends have advised him to be careful and err on the side of leniency, on the ground that if any action is needed when the crusade is thoroughly under way he is likely to be honored, and that this is the time to build a cyclone cellar.

Club Question Next.

The club question will be taken up next week with a view to determining just how far this device can be worked. It is not at all certain that the scheme is in use in Chicago for many years, until the vice crusade cleaned up Custom House Place and other notorious sections.

Then the Everleigh Club, notorious in the underworld of two hemispheres, and other disorderly houses were put out of business and the club device as a means of protecting vice vanished.

Experts on the Tenderloin conditions, like Lieutenant Val O'Farrell, declare that the "club" scheme as now operated tends to create more vicious conditions than any other system that has yet been invented. By limiting attendance to men and women of known tendencies and habits, the inevitable result, they declare, will be to make these clubs aggregations of degenerates of one type or another.

Such a condition would make matters infinitely worse than in the old days when the Cairo and the Tivoli and the Haymarket were the resorts of the most vicious in town. The Haymarket was the cleanest of these resorts, and for that matter, respectable compared to some of the so-called better class of places uptown to-day, but the Cairo and the Tivoli had the privacy that some of the divekeepers insist is necessary for the comfort of their clients and for keeping out the hol police.

TITANIC SURVIVOR DIES FROM HUNGER

Wife of Rich Russian Artist Lost Husband and Son and Became Invalid.

Mrs. Sadie Golden died from starvation yesterday in a laundry room at 235 East Thirtieth Street. She was the wife of a wealthy artist, and lived in Odessa, Russia. There her husband, Henry Golden, became embroiled in political difficulties and was forced to flee the country. With their small son the couple escaped to England and embarked on the Titanic.

When the steamship struck the iceberg the family was separated. Only Mrs. Golden survived, but she was so injured that she was taken to Bellevue Hospital after arriving in New York. There she became intimate with Mrs. Sophie Liefield, with whom she lived when discharged from the hospital. Mrs. Liefield said yesterday that her friend had told her that her husband was talking with John Jacob Astor when she saw him last. They had struck up quite a friendship, she said.

In Odessa the family had saved $100,000, but Mr. Golden had all this money on his person when the Titanic sank, and it was lost with him.

Because her benefactor had such a large family to care for, Mrs. Golden determined that she should no longer be a burden to her, and insisted that her hostess leave her to shift for herself. Mrs. Liefield reluctantly consented. For many days she saw nothing of the invalid. Finally, becoming anxious, she went yesterday to her room, which was in the same house, and found Mrs. Golden dead.

LADIES' SALE ON TO-DAY.

The box office sale of seats for the Lamb's All Star Gambo at the Century Theatre Friday evening and Saturday afternoon and evening for the benefit of the Actors' Fund of America will begin this morning at the theatre. Seats and boxes bid in at the auction sale last Thursday will be held until Wednesday only.

The box for which the Lamb's paid $12,500, realized by contributions from the members, was won by Joseph E. Meyer, of Newark, N. J., who yesterday turned it back to the club to be sold again for the benefit of the fund.

Sailors, Marines, Guardsmen, War Veterans and Civic Organizations Attend Impressive Ceremony in Honor of Men Who Died Defending Nation on Land or Sea.

Unopposed from the rain, 5,000 people stood bareheaded yesterday, many of them without umbrellas, while priests, their vestments dripping wet, celebrated at the navy yard the thirteenth annual military mass for the men who since 1776 have given their lives in the defence of the Stars and Stripes.

The altar, a temporary wooden structure, was built on a raised platform at the extreme north side of the parade grounds, directly opposite the Adelphi Street gate and in front of the barracks. It was banked with flowers and completely surrounded by palms and ferns. Several candles on tall stands, and delegations from the Irish Volunteers, United States Volunteer Life Savers, United States Customs Benevolent Association, United Spanish War Veterans, Irish Regiment, Knights of Columbus, Police Department, Fire Department, and Father Sean's Brigade, Uniformed Street Cleaning Department, Uniformed Corps Catholic Benevolent Legion, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Holy Name Society, Hebrew Veterans, Civil War, Confederate Veterans, Gloucester Camp, Veterans Relief Expedition, Veterans Russian-Japan War, Warren Camp, Sons of Veterans, Auxiliary, Libby Camp, Catholic Boys' Naval Brigade, Loughlin Battalion, Royal Arcanum, Leo Battalion and Companions of the Forest.

Promptly at 11 o'clock the Police Department band began to play a selection of the Irish, under Captain Robert McKinnon, the Irish band, escorted the Rev. William Henry Cronin, naval chaplain and colonel of the mass, to the altar.

The Rev. John P. Chidwick, chaplain of the Marine when it was blown up at Havana, the deacon at the mass; the Rev. Francis J. Sullivan, the Police Department chaplain, who was substituted; the Rev. John J. Durkin, master of ceremonies, and the Rev. William J. B. Daly, of Poughkeepsie, who preached.

The priests, all but Father Daly, were dressed in gold-trimmed white vestments, and Father Durkin, who progressed far when he was compelled to stop to brush the rain water from his eyes, Father Daly's cassock and barretta were very wet as he mounted the altar to preach.

He spoke of the service given by the men who have died to maintain the dignity of the United States. He touched on President Wilson's declaration that the country was made up of peace loving people, and he said that history would show that all of the wars of the United States have been conflicts for the sake of humanity, for the downtrodden and the persecuted.

The weather caused a last minute change in the plans, and instead of singing a solemn high mass a low mass was celebrated. An impressive feature of the service was the playing of the bugle. As Father Cronin raised the chalice and the adoration bell was rung a bugle of the Marine Band sounded a call. The ceremony ended with the congregation joining the choir in singing "America."

FAINT SAVES WIFE'S LIFE

Charles Thiele, Jr., of 835 Jefferson Avenue, Brooklyn, after shooting three times at his divorced wife, who has been living at 290 Palisade Street, put the revolver to his head and killed himself yesterday. His wife obtained a divorce some time ago because Thiele, she said, gambled and drank. When he lost at cards he came home and beat her.

In Thiele's pocket yesterday was found a letter begging his former wife to meet him. He went to the house, called her to the veranda and immediately began firing. At the first shot she fainted. Thinking her dead, he killed himself. He left a letter for his father asking him to pay debts of $9 and $6.

12 REPUBLICANS WILLING TO RUN FOR GOVERNOR

And the State Primaries Still Are Sixteen Months Distant.

WHITMAN'S NAME HEADS THE LIST

His Presidential Aspirations by No Means Forgotten, He Is "Playing Safe."

[From a Staff Correspondent of The Tribune.] Albany, May 30. With the 1916 primaries sixteen months away and most persons worrying about their vacations, Republican politicians in this state already are focussing their attention on the 1916 state primaries.

Twelve men have announced, either to friends or through friends, that they are in the race for the Republican nomination for Governor, and three are in the field for the Republican nomination for United States Senator.

For the toga now worn by the Democratic Senator, James A. O'Gorman, William Barnes has no longer any aspirations. He has withdrawn from the race in favor of Frederick C. Tanner, who succeeded him as state chairman. But Tanner has two rivals also from New York City—Representative William M. Calder, of Brooklyn, who ran for the nomination last year, and Senator Ogden L. Mills, of Manhattan, who led the fight against Barnes.

Candidates for the nomination for Governor are Governor Charles S. Whitman, ex-Senator Harvey D. Hinman, Lieutenant Governor Edward Schenck, Francis M. Hugo, Secretary of State, Eugene M. Travis, State Controller, Elton R. Brown, president pro tem of the Senate, Thaddeus M. Sweet, Speaker of the Assembly, Egbert E. Woodbury, State Attorney General, ex-Mayor Seth Low of New York, John H. Finley, president of the State Department of Education, Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, and Jacob Gould Schurman, president of Cornell University.

The chief claim most of these men have to the high offices to which they aspire is that they are holding or have held some office. Four pedagogues in the race for Governor are Messrs. Butler, Finley, Schurman and Low. Of these the last named two are leading members of the Constitutional Convention.

That Governor Whitman is a renomination does not mean that he has lost his Presidential aspirations. In the least, he is "playing safe." He feels and most of his friends openly admit that nothing short of a miracle, a sort of political Becker case, will make him a Presidential possibility.

A Republican well known in the nation said at a social dinner last week: "To be restored to the public esteem in which he was held on January 1 Whitman must do something between now and the end of the next legislative session that will make him as great an idol as Governor Hughes was when he was Governor. Just what that something is I confess I do not know. That such a chance will arise I doubt. His political future is no longer as it was on January 1, in his own hands. It is now in the hands of fate."

Should the nomination for Governor fall to Whitman or some other New York City man, the nomination for United States Senator would fall to an upstate man. With the withdrawal of Barnes from the senatorial contest no man north of the Harlem has entered the lists.

The retirement of Barnes was due to the verdict of the Syracuse jury and the dragging forth by Colonel Roosevelt of the skeletons the Albany man thought safely tucked away in his secret closet. His friends admit that Barnes made a mistake in suing Roosevelt for libel, and his retirement from the race for Senator is regarded here as his admission that his friends are right. That he still will try to wield power in state and national affairs, notwithstanding his inability to convince twelve men that the Colonel libelled him in calling him unpleasant political names no one here doubts for a moment.

Life Preserver Was Too Ugly, So Fra Elbertus Refused It

Before Sailing Jocosely Declined Use of Artist Friend's Invention—"Men and Nations Go Down to Death, but the Sun Shines." Last Published Words.

The life of Elbert Hubbard, who was lost on the Lusitania, might have been saved if he had not jokingly declined the offer of a life preserver before he sailed. The head of the Roycrofters visited the studio of George Carlock, the American artist, a few days before he sailed. Carlock, who has crossed the ocean frequently, had invented a patent life preserver.

The artist laughingly warned his friend that he feared the Kaiser would be looking for him on account of what he had written about "Interviewing the German Emperor at St. Helena." "I'll tell you what I will do," remarked Carlock. "I will lend you my life preserver, and you can send it back to me later on."

Mr. Hubbard looked at the apparatus, which is heavy and weighs about twenty-five pounds, and replied: "My dear sir, I was never associated with anything ugly in my life."

That ended the incident. Carlock sailed for Naples on an Italian liner the day before he sailed, taking his life preserver, which he had no occasion to use. Hubbard had no life preserver and went down with the Lusitania.

TREATY IMPERILS JAPANESE CABINET

Opposition Meetings Protest Failure of Group V of Demands on China.

Tokio, May 30. The Chinese crisis has been followed by serious internal political dissensions in Japan. Nightly meetings are being arranged by the Opposition party to incite the public against the ministry. One held last evening was broken up by students from Waseda University, of which Premier Okuma was president.

Attacks on the ministry continue in the Diet, the sessions of which are attended by large crowds, including many women who are conducting a feminist propaganda. The Opposition is arranging to introduce a resolution censuring the Cabinet, charging a diplomatic failure in the Chinese negotiations, and the expenditure of national funds without the approval of the Diet.

A governmental majority was returned in the election, and the ministry has no fear of being overthrown, although a test vote to show its strength has not yet been taken. The House of Peers, which hitherto has played only a passive part in public affairs, is beginning to assert its prerogatives, insisting that the Cabinet shall explain its policies in China. There is considerable clamor for renewal of negotiations concerning the fifth group of demands on China, which were held in abeyance for future consideration when the recent revolution overthrew the country was reached, but which are regarded here as the backbone of Japan's future in China. The principal provisions of Group V have to do with the appointment of Japanese to military and political advisers for China and for Japanese supervision over the manufacture or purchase by China of munitions of war.

The "Kokumin Shinbun" urges that Elbert Hubbard be sent to Peking to arrange a lasting alliance between mutual helplessness and friendship.

TO ASK LIFE TERM FOR FRANK TO-DAY

Counsel Will Be Heard by Pardon Commission in Atlanta.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.] Atlanta, May 30.—The hearing before the Pardon Commission on the petition of Leo M. Frank, convicted of the murder of Mary Phagan, for commutation to life imprisonment will begin to-morrow morning.

Atlanta believes to-night that the plea will be granted, for while there is considerable sentiment against changing the sentence, prominent jurists from every part of the state have appealed for the prisoner. Their pleas have swayed sentiment in favor of the prisoner.

Ex-Representative William M. Howard will present the argument of the prisoner, summing up the evidence, and dwelling on the doubt expressed by Judge Roon, by two State Supreme Court judges and by two United States Supreme Court judges.

Delegations from Chicago, from Savannah, Dalton, Macon, Columbus and other cities in Georgia will appeal for the prisoner and prominent Atlantans will also speak in his behalf. William M. Smith, Conley's representative, will tell the Commission Frank is innocent and Conley guilty. Judge Roon's affidavit, telling of the hostile atmosphere of the trial and a letter in which he urged clemency, will be read; all the written records in the case will also be introduced.

Frank's attorneys believe the case will be completed within one day.
